Student Information Release

Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA)

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) is a Federal law that protects the privacy of student education records. The law applies to all schools that receive funds under an applicable program of the U.S. Department of Education. FERPA gives parents certain rights with respect to their children's education records. These rights transfer to the student when he or she reaches the age of 18 or attends a school beyond the high school level. Students to whom the rights have transferred are "eligible students."

King's College will not release information to anyone outside the institution without the written consent of the student, except as provided by federal law as stated in the King's College catalog. Once completed, this form will remain in effect until the student has graduated or has withdrawn from King's College or if the student completes a new form AND returns it to the Department of Education.

King's Guidelines for Interaction with Children

There are many basic things that supervisors and volunteers can do to help prevent child abuse and protect themselves from false allegations. Some are obvious, some are less so, but each acts to safeguard all participants in King's activities.

- 1) Never hit or strike a child in any manner—even in so-called “play.”
- 2) Do not use physical punishment of any kind.
- 3) Avoid being alone with one child.
- 4) It is advisable to always have at least two adults present, even with groups of multiple children. This prevents abuse and the potential for allegations. It also ensures children's safety in the event of an injury or other emergency.
- 5) Do not accompany children to the bathroom without another adult present.
- 6) Make sure an adult can see all the children participating in your activities at all times.
- 7) Have the children use the buddy system; children shouldn't go anywhere without their "buddy," especially in public activities such as field trips.
- 8) Invite parents to join in activities whenever they can.
- 9) Hugs are OK if they are appropriate and if both people are comfortable with them. Take clues from the body language of the child or simply ask – is it okay for me to hug you?
- 10) Be aware of children's personal boundaries and respect them. For example, some people like being close and getting or giving hugs, while others don't like a lot of close contact with other people.
- 11) Do not exchange any personal information such as phone numbers or e-mail addresses, and do not respond or initiate any relationships with children outside of the volunteer setting (e.g., do not “friend” children on Facebook, exchange texts, or initiate any face-to-face meetings, however innocent).
- 12) If a child is initiating contact with you outside of the volunteer setting, especially multiple times, report this to your supervisor.
- 13) If a child confides to you that he or she is being abused, report this as soon as possible to your supervisor and follow King's Policy for the Protection of Children in making a report to the authorities. The same is true if you have a reasonable cause to suspect a child is being abused besides them telling you.

In general, social media users should further be aware that they may incur liability arising from commentary deemed to be proprietary, copyrighted, defamatory, libelous, or obscene (as defined by law).
